

I have worked in a number of restaurants over the years and have developed a keen sense of customer relations. On more than one occasion I have had customers tell me that I am the reason they choose to frequent that particular business, which has given me a great love of customer interaction.

I'm hoping to combine this with my programming skills to develop long-lasting business relationships with those who are looking to better the world in ways that I stand for. The internet has helped me in many ways in my past, and I truly hope I am able to create more opportunities to benefit others in the future.